\ In addition to the reported compensation, the organization provided to the employee certain supplemental retirement benefits. These benefits were computed on the basis of the employee's total compensation, less the maximum amount of compensation that may be considered under a tax-qualified retirement plan. These benefits provide retirement income for an accumulated 19-year service period in accordance with the employee's employment contract. It should be noted that the parties agreed that no additional supplemental retirement benefits would be earned from and after January 1, 2004. For the 19-year period of employment ended December 31, 2003, the organization incurred an obligation to provide a total supplemental retirement benefit, the lump-sum present value of which was reported on the organization's Form 990 for the year 2003. The entire benefit became vested in 2004 and was taxed to the employee in 2004. The organization decided to pay this benefit in two payments: the first on January 29, 2004 in the amount of $4,956,227, and the second on a future date agreed to by the organization and the employee with interest fixed at the prime rate.*
